a. General Cabell had asked him to look into the reproduction problem in the Administration Building Printing Plant. He also said that the Inspector General in his report on the Office of Basic Intelligence had recommended that they use fewer graphics and make some other changes in their standards which would lessen the reproduction load. He agreed to make this available to [REDACTED] and I telephoned him and asked him to get in touch with Mr. [REDACTED] in order to secure the necessary information. I also emphasized to [REDACTED] that the study which he is currently conducting should include both the changes which might be made in OBI as well as in the Printing and Reproduction Plant.

State pouch service. Ash had talked with [REDACTED] who seemed to be seriously concerned about the matter and felt that the National Security Council should send something to the ICIS right away. Ash requested that [REDACTED] prepare a paper which could form the basis of another paper which the NSC could transmit to ICIS. I asked [REDACTED] to prepare this paper but not to send it until after General Cabell and possibly the Director had been briefed. Later in the day Bob Macy telephoned with a much more conciliatory attitude concerning an interim solution to this problem as a result of a talk he had had with [REDACTED] and Russell Ash. I told Macy of [REDACTED] conversation with Ash and our plan of procedure. I also told him that I thought we would be coming back to talk to him about money for an interim solution. He appeared receptive but still thought that both the interim solution and the long-range solution should be attacked on a community-wide basis.

3. I attended a Logistics Briefing for General Cabell which I think went quite well.

4. I discussed with the Director the possibility of attending the Harvard Advanced School of Business Administration for one of its courses during 1959. I emphasized to him that this was not a personal aspiration but that I would be willing to do it if he felt it would be beneficial to the Agency. He said that he very definitely thought it would be advantageous to the Agency and requested that I plan to attend the course which begins in February.
